(This section was built of earthen material on sett foundations in 1904 and will eventually be removed). The main section of the house was built in 1757 by Jeremiah Brown as an addition for his 3rd wife -  laid up in fieldstone the house  (date date stone, plus many stones with initials of friends of Brown).  + corner stone  Laid up in fieldstone, house was later  stuccoed  (now being repointed). During the later 18th C. a early 19th C. the house was extensively remodelled - the according to Federal style. Windows were narrowed &amp; lengthened, woodwork changed (all woodwork worthy of this period except for staircase panelling &amp; balusters - 18th C.); the corner fireplace, the two downstairs rooms were replaced by fireplace centrally located on the end wall, Federal mantels with  needle  were put in. The 19th C. porch (to be removed) corner evidence of a pent roof - records and photographs pre 1904

Mr. Plumstead's stone house was built in 1757 as is indicated three places on the stone wall. Several sets of initials appear on the structure, apparently the stone masons. The most prominent initials are J.B., which may be one of the Browns who owned the mill down the hill. The house is th two full storys and is three bays long and two bays deep with a porch across the north facade. On the west side of the building is a two story frame addition which was added when the original log structure was removed, as can be traced in the attic. The original back door and frame was located in the basement and is noteworthy because the double doors were attached by a strap hinge to each other and to the frames on one end only. The original close-string stair remains in the hall, but the two rooms to the east of the hall have been finished with federal woodwork

A black and white photograph of a stone wall. The wall is composed of large, irregular stones of varying shades of gray, held together by a light-colored mortar. The stones have a rough, textured surface. In the center of the image, a large, roughly rectangular stone is prominently displayed. On this stone, the letters 'DL' are inscribed in a simple, dark, sans-serif font. The 'D' and 'L' are slightly separated. To the right of the stone wall, there is a dark, vertical strip, possibly a shadow or a different material, which runs the full height of the image.
